Notes

John Callaghan (1860-1949) and his wife Elizabeth Sullivan (1861-1926) reared their family in Knockgorm, Kilcorney, Co. Cork. As the eldest son, he remained on the family farm, and his parents and several siblings immigrated to Haverhill, Massachusetts in the 1880s and 1890s. Three of John and Elizabeth's children also moved to the United States: Timothy, John, and Ellen (Nellie).

The 1901 Irish census shows the Callaghan family living in Knockgorm, Kilcorney. All are listed as being born in Co. Cork.

John Callaghan is 40, and his occupation is agricultural labourer. He speaks Irish and English.

His wife is Elizabeth, 40. She speaks Irish and English. Their children are:

Timothy (16) letter carrier

Catherine (14) scholar

John (9) scholar

Ellen (5) scholar

Honora (3) scholar

None of the children speaks Irish.

His mother-in-law, Mary, is 85. She is a widow. She speaks Irish and English, but cannot read. Her maiden name was Mary Howard.

In the 1911 Irish census, John Callaghan is 51 and listed as an agricultural laborer. His wife Elizabeth is 50. They were married for 29 years. Six of 11 children are alive.

The children living at home are:

John (20) agricultural laborer

Ellie (13+) scholar

Honorah (12) scholar

Julia (9) scholar

According to his granddaughter Betty Daley, John walked with a cane in his old age. He didn't like thunder. He was afraid of bulls--he would walk miles out of his way to avoid them.
